Job Description

We are looking for a recent Software Engineer graduate to join our Engineering Team.
Together with your team, you will be crafting code that brings to life game features, items and levels in our games, which are enjoyed by a community of over 40 million monthly active players. This scale comes with very interesting engineering challenges which we solve together, using a technology-agnostic approach. Alongside with our games, we continue to grow as software engineers and as a team.

Here's what you'll do

Build an amazing experience for the millions of users who play every day

Design, implement, test and maintain our casual gaming products

Write clean, sustainable code and participate in peer code-reviews

You will have ownership of a primary work stream, which you will own end-to-end, but you'll also work in close collaboration with your fellow mobile engineers

Brainstorm new ideas together with your team to continuously iterate and improve our games' user experience

Desired skills and experiences

University degree in Computer Science, Software Engineering, or any equivalent subject

Having game projects in Unity is an advantage

There's no need to have prior game development experience. If you are an engineer and value a holistic and technology-agnostic approach to software engineering, we'd like to hear from you!

What you'll learn in this role

How to develop, release and maintain high quality code

Strong engineering skills and programming fundamentals

A good command of various programming languages (such as C# and Java) and hands-on experience of best practices and idioms of these languages

Software architecture design, OOP, and design patterns and principles on various scales
